Winchester, as the capital of Wes-sex from the days of Egbert, as the capital of England under its Norman capital of England under its Norman line of kings, as a residence of English sovereigns till the time of Charles II, has an importance disproportionate to its size in the development of English history. The spectacle of the Winchester pageant of 1908 will flustrate that development in a most forcible and realistic manner. It will take place on the actual spot—Wolvesey castle—on which several of the scenes to be presented were originally enactbe presented were originally enact-

Wolvesey itself is one of the most historic spots in the south of England. Within view is the Centic strenghold of St. Catherine's hill, still girdled by its earthen rampart; within the precincts of Wolvesey was the residence of some Roman officer in early days; it was at the old Saxon palace on this site that Alfred undertook the compilation of the "Anglo-Saxon Chronicle." was at the old saxon palace on this site that Alfred undertook the compilation of the "Anglo-Saxon Chronicle," the first fruits, it may almost be said, of English prose literature: above the walls of Wolvesey he hung the pirates whom he captured at Southampton. Here, too, Egbert (in 829, A. D.) held the council at which the actual "christening" of the land took place, and the federated Saxon kingdoms received the name of England (Angeland). The ruins of the Norman castle, which will form the background of the scene, are the remains of the fortified palace of Henry de Blois, grandson of William the Conqueror, as much statesman and warrior as he was bishop and monk.

The scenes that have been selected will represent events of importance in English history which took place in or near the small but ancient City of Winchester.

OTHER INTERESTING SIGHTS

OTHER INTERESTING SIGHTS.

It may safely be said that a visitor to Winchester may find much to interest him besides its pageant. The cathedral (the grave danger to the structure of which is the occasion of the pageant) is a very mausoleum of Saxon kings, beginning with Cerdic (459 to 534, A. D.), "35 of whose line made Winchester their capital, 20 of whose line are buried or enshrined in the cathedral:" and it is a school of architecture of every age from the Norman conquest to the reigns of Henry VIII and Mary. The great hospital of St. Cross, founded by Bishop Henry de Blois, and augmented by Cardinal Beaufort, the son of "time-honoured Lancaster," where wayfarers have received for more than eight cenhave received for more than eight cen-turies "a horn of beer and a manchet of bread," lies at but a short distance from the city. Winchester college, with or bread, "les at but a short distance from the city. Winchester college, with its fine buildings in the perpendicular style, and its position, unique in some ways among English schools, lies within a few yards of the pageant ground itself. The fine County hall, a fragment of an old Norman castle, in which partitioners, met state trials were held. liaments met, state trials were held, and kings feasted, before which Raleigh was brought out for execution and then reprieved, and which fell into the hands reprieved, and which fell into the hands of Oliver Cromwell during the great civil war, still stands beside High street; and there are other memorials of the past which are dear to Englishmen, and which belong in part at least to all members of the widespread Anglo-Saxon race, parted now by the events of history, but never wholly of history, but never wholly

President Nephi L. Morris Discusses Salvation for The Dead.

WORLD SWEEPING PRINCIPLE

Without Exhortation, Peoples of All Nations Work In Harmony With Plan for This Dispensation.

Yesterday at the meeting of this Daughters of Utah Pioneers, President Nephi L. Morris of the Salt Lake stake delivered an address upon "Salvation for the Dead," beginning with the evidence of a growing feeling in the world against the old orthodox belief of eternal judgment hinging irrevocably upon the life in this world. He read extracts from noted ecclesiastical authorities, showing their thought had grasped the unreasonableness of the proposition that no chance for repentance and progress existed beyond the grave. Their exposition of this belief raised a furore in the established churches, that furore in the established churches, that is, among the classese whom they reached, though, said the speaker, at exactly that period the missionaries of the Latter-day Saint Church were promulgating the doctrine of salvation for the dead among the humbler classes, many of whom accepted it joyfully. He said that a isgnificant fact was that the scripture of the old dispensation ended with the prophecy concerning Biljah to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the children to the fathers, and that the new one opened with it—this being a part of the scriptures quoted by the angel to the Prophet tJoseph relative to the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

IN THE WORLD.

With the world, said the speaker, there is confusion and doubt concerning this doctrine; with the Latter-day Saints there is certainty, and as a proof of the truth of this prophecy he told of the great interest being shown by the world in the compiling of genealo-gical records. Even those who have no knowledge of this doctrine, he said, are going to enormous expense, and untiring pains to accumulate the names and records of accestors and those in and records of ancestors, and these in many almost miraculous cases come to the hands of the saints without either the mains of the saints without either labor or outlay. The answer to this wonder, he said, is that the world is under the inspiration of this peculiar prophecy, and though it knows it not, is working in harmony with that great law. He spoke of the clearness of the knowledge under which the Latter-day Saints worked, and said that their labor or certify was hing samplemented on saints worked, and said that their labor on earth was bing supplemented on the other side. Here thousands are being preached to by believers in the gospel, the work there being greater in proportion to the number who have passed beyond.

He cited the saying of the Savior relative to His solny "to weach to the a compliment to the daughters upon having made these studies a part of their program.

The society's president, Mrs. Susa Y Gates, thanked the speaker for the society, and a motion made by Mrs. Zing Y. Card prevailed that at the meeting of the genealogical section henceforth, testimonies relating to this work for the dead be given by members, as well as the regular topics.

A new member was added to the socity in the person of Mrs. Ida Allen, socity in the person of Mrs. Ida Allen, and a presentation of the loan of a brass andiron was made by Mrs. Jonana Gregory Angell, the Irons having been brought across the plains in 1848.

A business meeting of the society will be held next Wedaesday at the Lion House, at 3 o'clock and all members are urged to be present, as plans for the usual summer outing at Wandamere will be discussed.
